I urge the FCC to classify internet service providers as Title 2 Telecommunications Services. ISPs should not be allowed to delegate the speed which websites or internet services content arrives to my computer. I pay my ISP for access to the internet at a certain advertised speed and also pay providers for that content. That should be all that is needed to enjoy the wealth of content available on the internet.

Continuing to allow ISPs to not remain classified as Title 2 Telecommunications Services will allow them to charge third party services more for last mile access to customers. If ISPs classification aren't changed they will continue to expand their own content offerings while slowing down other content providers unless they pay the ISPs more money to provide a service they were already paid for by myself and other customers.

Classify ISPs as Title 2 Telecommunications Services. "Fast Lanes" are bad for the internet and bad for consumers.
