Allowing large, deep-pocket web companies to purchase the right to first access to consumer doors is not only unethical, but unconstitutional. This proceeding would create unfair advantages that would cripple small-business entrepreneurships and startups, alike. And this in conjunction with proceeding 14-57 would allow the creation of a single, multi-platformed, monopolistic ISP that would with no doubt come to dominate the industry even more than it they already do. This proceeding should not be passed.
