I am asking you to reclassify Internet service providers (ISPs) as Title II common carriers. The sheer size and astronomical growth of the Internet economy has rendered it a crucial service for both businesses and consumers, alongside the Internet's rise as a fundamental player in American culture. Yet both current and proposed regulatory schemes permit ISPs to discriminate based on content, and have enabled them to establish and secure de facto information monopolies. This can only serve to impair the growth of the Internet economy and cripple the democratic foundations of American culture.

Please reclassify Internet service providers as Title II common carriers.
