Dear FCC,

I'm Liz Weishaar and I live in Stowe, VT.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) should treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because ISPs could act as the gatekeepers to their subscribers.

The Internet is important to me because internet access has taken on the nature of a public utility, and ISPs should not be allowed to collude with deep-pocket business to decide who benefits from--and who gets left out of--bandwidth availability.
