Dear FCC,

I'm Nele Wollert and I live in Berlin, NY.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) should treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

I've been working for startups for the last 5 years. Without net neutrality, it'll get even harder for emerging business to succeed in markets with strong incumbents that can just outspend you in order to hinder your access to consumers. This is hindering the success of what could potentially be new multi-billion businesses such as Facebook, LinkedIn, Google, Twitter etc. Net neutrality is crucial to the free flow of ALL information, not just information beneficial to a wealthy few. Your decision to allow let ISPs charge for access to users violates what I believed was one of the basic principles of a free and fair digital economy by compromising real, fair competition in the online markets. I am truly shocked that you are willing to let this happen.
