Dear FCC,

I'm Keaton M. Taylor and I live in Webb City, MO.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) should treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

The Internet is important to me because I am an internet worker. I build websites for a living. This potential legislation puts the power of the internet in the hands of the few - too much like so many other things in our country currently. I urge you to back away from this plan and move to keep the internet a free and open place.
