

7521127738.txt

There is no competition or open market for internet services, in any place I've lived (except when living overseas). So there is no way for me to vote with my feet and leave a provider that restricts access to content I want. Fastlanes should not then be allowed when there are no market forces on ISP's pushing them to better service.