

7521127774.txt

I am deeply disappointed in today's FCC decision. It is wrong. Creating a "fast lane" BY DEFINITION makes everything else the "slow lane."

This decision has the potential to greatly damage online startups while discouraging the infrastructure companies (who have a monopoly today) from increasing performance or lowering price.

This is an anti-consumer decision, and the FCC should be ashamed.