

7521130372.txt

I am a supporter of a strong central government, but the FCC is one agency that frequently challenges that position. Puritanical censorship of the public airways was bad enough, but this net neutrality business is beyond the pale. The internet is the central technological paradigm of the 21st century, and is fundamentally changing the way humanity communicates, works, lives, and thinks. It is as important to today's world as the advent of electricity at the turn of the last century. It should be treated as the vital public utility that it is. Do NOT let it be subverted by monopolistic corporations whose only vision is to monetize this modern wonder of the world as efficiently as possible. Do something that moves America forward for a change.