As a woman from a lower middle class background who's trying to break into the media world creatively and professionally, open and neutral internet is a god sent. I can start webpages for projects, programs, and web series without feeling like my sites are at an inherent disadvantage because I did not grow up with direct connections to the field. I thought for once, hey, maybe I'm finally on at least some kind of level of even footing with the competition.... way to fuck that up.
