

7521130752.txt

I am contacting you today about the recent talks around the FCC's plan to allow a 'fast lane', thus reducing the freedom of the internet and net neutrality. I understand that there is a lot of pressure from lobbyist to allow this to pass, but it is not in the best interest of this country to allow these corporations to essentially get away with not providing the content (delivery service) that we are paying them to provide. Any loss of ground on this subject not only negatively affects consumers across the board but also puts us further behind the rest of the developed world.

Please, please, please reclassify ISP's to be common carriers so that they must provide and follow the rules that you have already laid out for them. Allowing them to continue to strong arm our government only further degrades our ability to innovate and move forward.

Thanks you for taking the time to read my message.

John Flagg