

7521130815.txt

As a consumer, I pay an exorbitant amount of money for internet access. My ISP and most others charge based on the speed of the connection. i.e. - 50 megabits per second of bandwidth is more expensive than 15 Mbps. It is absolutely inappropriate for any ISP to charge a content provider for priority access to my connection. I must have the freedom to decide what content I want to receive up to the maximum speed of the connection for which I subscribe.

I already pay for the connection and chose the speed I desire. Please support net-neutrality legislation that forbids ISPs from favoring any content over any other.