True Net Neutrality needs to be preserved. Allowing internet service providers (ISPs) to, in any way, alter the delivery of data should be illegal. Allowing ISPs to charge additional fees to content providers (Netflix, Google, etc) will tip the scales at the expense of innovation. Smaller companies may not be able to afford the additional fees to deliver their content to customers.

ISPs main and only focus should be to deliver data as fast as possible and go about this manner of charging customers for faster service is the wrong answer. A very high percentage of US citizens have only 1 possible ISP, and even more only have 2.

I support ISPs should be considered Title II entities.
