As a new member of the professional technology sector, I plead with you to stop this proposal. Not only will this limit innovation and creation with arguably the largest source of potential creativity and cooperation the world has ever created, it will make jobs harder, peace harder, equality harder, and lives harder.

More money will flow to the companies that provide the internet and they will hold a monopoly over something that has always been accessible to everyone. This should not change. For millions of people, their lives have been immeasurably improved by free and equal access to the internet. Please don't cut this life source off for future generations.

The Internet thrives because it is an open and free marketplace of ideas. This new set of rules is a sweetheart deal to Big Telecom that will create a "pay-to-play" system that unfairly favours large corporate websites.

Please reject this proposal immediately, and instead create real Net neutrality that protects an open and fair Internet.
