I am concerned that allowing broadband providers to use "commercially reasonable practices" will result in an end to open access to the Internet. I urge the FCC to ban "paid prioritization" and similar practices that will eliminate net neutrality and allow money to dominate this essential communication and information medium. In addition, I understand that Congress regularly writes laws that use the broadest possible basis of authority. I urge the FCC to assert its authority using the full range of its legal standing--both Section 706 and Title II.
