

7521134112.txt

I believe the FCC's proposals for Internet "fast lanes" will result in increased price gouging of consumers by Internet Service Providers. As the gate keepers to online content, ISPs have no incentive to lower costs of Internet packages that do not fast lanes, and every incentive to charge premiums for fast lanes to bandwidth intensive content (streaming/downloading games and video). Fast lanes should be banned and ISPs should be forced to update their infrastructure to handle the increased bandwidth demands instead.