I SUPPORT NET NEUTRALITY. In all the years I worked in telecom we talked about seeing many things happen with the internet. It has always been anticipated that big companies would eventual charge for internet in a similar manner as long distance... basically that internet would replace long distance as these companies money makers. It's amazing to me how all the rulings on "in region" and "out of region" (like all the rules we had to follow at Qwest have been somehow been worked around by bypassing the LECs and moving to internet based, well everything, and now the LECs have gobbled up all the cellular services... what was the point? Now your threatening everything from what kids results kids will get from their searches to do homework assignments to how professionals will be able to do their jobs based on who their internet providers are or what their parents/they look at or what YOU want them to see. It's sad. The internet is free. You have just found a way to extort it like everything else beautiful or awesome in this world.

And you have Howard Stern a hard time...
