You're elected as a middle man, a middle man who relays on the message of the public.

That is it.

Stop trying to stroke your ego and think you have decision making ability. Regardless of actually doing your job and being a representative of the people, or taking money from corporations (or whoever funds your PAC), you are still just a middle man.

No actual decision is being made by you, our political leaders. You're just made to feel like you're important, when in all reality, you're as replaceable as a monkey in a psych experiment.

I saw my little 2 year old cousin pushing his toy, bubble making, lawn mower behind his father, who was actually cutting the grass. Every step, each swipe, back and forth. And you know, he would have sworn he actually cut the grass.

If you're going to fuck us, at least stop making it so damn obvious. Try and hide it like the old days, at least.

Laziness, where will it lead our society next??
