

At this time, I would like to take this opportunity to express my profound dismay in the whole proposed "Net Neutrality" issue that seems to now be coming up for vote.

If passed, this not so pleasant piece of legislature will do MUCH to favour the desires of the big corporations that make up the Internet Providers around the United States, and NOTHING to fulfill the needs of the end user.

After all, if passed, this will most certainly make the Internet a MUCH more expensive thing to be able to have, as this could mean having to pay per use of each select Internet site, from what I understand.

The citizens have not asked for such a bill to be passed, this is simply the desires of already super rich to further make yet more money off the backs of everyday citizens like myself.

Be it detestable proposed legislature like PIPA, SOPA and ACTA or this Net Neutrality nonsense which I've heard is trying to be passed off as some sort of good thing that will make the Internet experience better, more enjoyable is actually just yet another prime example among many floating around these days that involves people at high level positions who make extravagant salaries courtesy off of the back of poorer income, everyday people like tax payers and consumers to fork out yet more money, because people at high levels in the federal government who only know of greed and their love of the almighty US dollar need to understand that it is WE the people (the EVERYDAY, low level people who help make this country run far more than the super rich or the huge corporations, or big government).

Therefore, what with all the money people already pay big corporations and big government, and given how the economy is already in the commode, this will only make matters worse, NOT better for regular, everyday people.

Also, the very nature of the Internet is that it is a free and open type place.

Yes, granted, it is not always a nice place at times, but same can be said of the real world, of course.

Point is, Net Neutrality threatens to destroy the free and open forum type nature that has been the long standing nature of the Internet.

I mean, let me put it this way... would you really have people pay money to be able to voice their opinions? Would you really seek to squelch the voice of the people? Would you really seek to try to turn something as decentralzied as the Internet is rightwise meant to be into whatever you want it to be, or need it to be.

For the most part, the main end users of the Inernet here in America are regular, everyday people who quite frankly don't have a voice left anywhere else in a society that5 has gone so hardcore right-wing conservative to the point that ANYONE who DARES speak up against the super rich and super powerful who make up governmetn and mega corproations is automatically treated alsmot as if they are somehow the enemy of the state, or something.

Like as if all free speech aginast much of the legisture passed or being prosed is now considered "politically incorrect".

Thing is, it is ALWAYS correct for the people to stand up and say "NO" to anything they don't want anytime they want. In fact, is not only a right, it is pretty much a duty to stand up to the bullying the government and big coporations are doing to everyday people all the time anymore.

The Internet represents one of the last places left where regular people have a place where they can speak freely and open on an Internet that is equally as free and open.

Take that away, and where does it leave regular, low level everyday people all around the country, hmmm? It leaves them without ANYWHERE to speak freely.

And, it puts the Internet squarely in the hands of people who it does NOT belong in the hands of... big corporations and big government. (AKA The super rich that make up the 1 percent of the world's wealthiest men).

It's not the rich that need a break, it is REGULAR PEOPLE.

It is not the rich that need a place where they can go to speak freely about what's going on in society when it comes to all the bad things the rich are doing to the poor, it is the poor who need such a place to speak this sort of thing about the rich.

Long story shorter, in closing...I am hereby registering my VERY loud resounding "NO" when it comes to allowing this Net Neutrality bill pass.

And, it is my most sincere hope that for once, those in charge listen to the people who do all the bill paying to big corporations and big government around here... the everyday common man.

For once, let's put the common man first, above all else. And, let's put the super rich at bottom for change.

After all, the saying goes "We the people", not "You the government", just to point that out.

With GREAT frustration,

The People
