

7521145722.txt

I am a freelance graphic designer, artist, and writer. The majority of my work involves research on the internet, and I have plans to create a website to showcase my own work. However, should paid prioritization go into effect, it is likely that I, as a smaller entity, would be driven from the market.

It is vitally important that the internet remain open and neutral, and that ISP's not be given the option to prioritize service. I support, in the strongest possible terms, the proposal to reclassify the broadband internet as a public utility, complete with regulation and guarantees of net neutrality. The internet must not become governed by special interests and large, unregulated corporations. It is a public and democratic space, and the FCC must fight to keep it that way.

DO NOT take the path of paid prioritization. DO NOT allow fast lanes and slow lanes. DO NOT cripple the internet.