

7521147956.txt

I hope I selected the right option for discussing my concern about preserving net neutrality. I think it's crucial that internet content not possibly be controlled or be limited by private interest. I think that limiting the most responsive use of the internet to big payers gives those payers too much control over what information is most accessible to the rest of us. Today's use of the internet is as a primary source of information and providing the most responsive speeds to only a select few gives that select few the opportunity to limit what information is most available. Thanks for hearing me out.