

Dear FCC representative,

I am writing this today to protest against the proposed new net neutrality rules. I am speaking as a humble user of the internet and as an advocate for free speech.

How fair is it that you would allow big companies to muscle in on the ability for the everyday layman to receive all the great resources for advancing our quality of life simply because I do not have the means to pay for it. This is not fair and it's not what the internet was intended for when it was introduced. The ISP's are trying to strong arm Americans into believing we need this to improve the services of the internet when in reality it will only serve to line the pockets of these giants at the cost of internet speed for the right price. America is the land of opportunity but slowly the opportunities are being pillaged by greedy BIG business and stifling any one with ingenuity. The internet is for the people to use not for the FCC to regulate and sale.

Stop this before you continue to do all Americans a grave disservice!!

Sincerely,
Jose Flores
