

The blatant corporate greed that clearly motivates the interested parties whom desire to change the current state of Net Neutrality should in and of itself be a large warning sign that there is something very wrong here. Don't you feel shame? Don't you feel a moral obligation to your constituents? How could any elected or appointed official charged with governing and protecting the rights of American citizens so obviously try to fool the public? Thank god for a few large companies with money who could afford to bring media attention to this issue did so. I blame the regulators and officials at the FCC for us finding ourselves on the precipice of our beloved Internets death, i can say this because it seems clear to me that lobbyist's pockets are deep and weak humans are easily affected, especially when pressured from lobbyists whom all have been great campaign donaters i have no doubt. Its just awesome that you got caught in the act of trying to change the rules quietly behind the american public's back and now have to "openly debate" these issues and have course corrected your process. Its not a vastly complicated and existential dilemma, unlike you would have the public believe. the rules have been set in place for us to manage this resource fairly and appropriately, THEY ARE CURRENTLY WORKING WELL!!!! The only issue i see at all is that an ISP, Comcast, has broken those rules and is getting away with it! now normally when a company breaks the rules set in place to govern resources they are fined and punished...hmmm, why now that an ISP has done it are you scratching your head thinking, wow we need to find a way to change this and help these poor, poor, multi-billion dollar corporations. sounds like bizarro world stuff right? Only in some backwards world could large corporations blatantly ignore standard practices and then be completely sided with by our governing body. Do you like the future of an internet that is sold to you just like your TV package, BECAUSE I DON'T! Thats where this road leads! in a not to distant future i can see the ads already. "Do you like shopping, well (consumer), i have a great package for you, in addition to your monthly fee you will be charged a 12.99 premium fee but that will give you HIGH SPEED access to all the greatest shopping sites like Amazon and Ebay and many other retailers!" "Hello consumer! do you like sports?!?!? well, for a small additional fee you can have unrestricted access to all your favorite sport sites like ESPN.com, NFL.com, fantasy game sites and so Many more! *12 month commitment required" Do you see it clearly now? do you see a world of unnecessary corporate fleecing gone mad? the internet should NEVER be tiered! it is a resource for all of us to use equally, not for those with more means to have a greater benefit, i want my child to grow up in a world where he or she will have equal access to all of the wonderful learning and educational resources that are available on the internet. how much of that information will be choked out because it will only be accessible at dial-up speeds. I will coin it the "Corporate Controlled Commnet of America"! where only profitable .coms will be accessed ease and everything that we dreamed of will have died long ago. Good job, your greed is directly destroying the America.
