The current proposal by the FCC will end everything the internet stands for. This is a plan to help the rich get richer, create a more solid pseudo-monopoly, and provide nothing good to the general public. It will stifle creativity and start-ups will be sitting ducks that can make no headway in such an internet market.

This is absolutely the worst possible thing you could do to push forward thinking and innovation.

Having Comcast and Verizon in Tom's pocket sure does help make this decision easier for him, I can imagine. Forget the money, think about the ethics!
