

The Net neutrality rulings are clearly swayed in the favor of former telecom executives at the FCC and their counter parts still in the private sector. Please use the voice of the people, whom you are supposed to represent, to make these decisions, not a short-term monetary gain for Comcast or any other awful provider that already have so much that they don't care about their customer base. Classify Internet providers as common providers and let sleeping dogs lie. This country has been screwed by vague legislation too many times in the past 13 years and I personally am sick of the over regulation and cherry picking bills by the upper class and corporations. This will damage our economy and stifle the creative freedom that makes this country what it is.

John S Robertson