The death of Net Neutrality would be detrimental to the global community and economy. It would allow large companies to gain priority access to internet users. With the death of net neutrality will come the death of start up companies and small online businesses. In a world of instant access and gratification, many people abandon a link if it takes more than a few seconds to load. If Net Neutrality dies, then we will see an internet where ISPs will not construct fast internet highways for people willing to pay, but rather we will see ISPs restrict access and choke the flow of data, allowing what we have come to know as the status quo of internet access only to the highest bidding companies. This will result in small businesses and start up companies receiving sub-par access speeds and it will result in less people visiting their site, causing the death of small companies both nationally and globally.

I urge you to keep both national and global interests in mind while making your decisions. The death of Net Neutrality may help ISPs like Comcast and Verizon, but it will ultimately be detrimental to the global society as a whole. Thank you for your time and best of luck with your decision making process.
