

7521153628.txt

Net Neutrality is vital for the American Public. To allow a small number of firm to control the bandwidth available to selected users places a great burden on those unable or unwilling to pay for an internet fast lane. This has the potential to create a monopoly that would harm free speech and innovation. The FCC has a duty to speak for all Americans by imposing sensible non biased regulations. These proposed regulations only benefit the companies that control the internet access points at the same time they harm the American people.