Dear Mr Tom Wheeler:

The net must legally be made a common carrier. This is consistent with democratic principles. If you do not make it a common carrier, everyone will understand that you and your supporters are undemocratic. This will eventually undermine the power of the FCC to govern, since a lack in faith of a governing agency leads to the erosion of its' power.

It will also open the gates to more monied interests. Once industry understands that they have the FCC under their collective thumbs, they will simply press harder.

Resist the influence of money. Do what is right, and make the net a democratic common carrier.
