The internet, since its invention has put everyone on an equal footing. it allowed your own little website to become just as popular as some huge companies website. Look at Google vs. Yahoo for example. a small, new, better company replaced an old and less effective one. Now look at many of the other innovations of Google: Android, YouTube, Google fiber, etc. without net neutrality none of this would have been possible. Failing to reclassify internet as a utility would prevent such innovations in the future.
