

7521161177.txt

Dear Chairman Wheeler and the FCC Board,
I am filing these public comments in response to your period of public commentary on what to do with the future of the internet.

I feel it is important to remind you, that, as a user of the internet, and as someone who has monitored these proceedings for quite some time, that we, the common people are getting screwed here, and we will not taking this lying down. First off, we've already paid the internet providers of the US $200 Billion in tax breaks for them to provide higher internet speeds. In return we got nothing. 50 states and the District of Columbia were supposed to have provided fiber and fiber/co-ax hybrid networks to their constituents as written in the National Information Infrastructure section of the Telecommunications Act of 1996. We currently have less than 1% of the target speeds that we were promised on broadband, and we paid these companies $200 billion to give that paltry amount of bandwidth to us. Now they're threatening to build less infrastructure to support their growth? THEY ALREADY DID THAT. We're calling their bluff, and we're ready to stand up and show them that we have not forgotten.

Secondly, it has come to light that Verizon is actually using the public utility cuts to boost their profits and take even more money from we, the taxpayers. Well, you can't have your cake and eat it, too. It's time to ACTUALLY pay the damn piper. Reclassify Broadband as Common Carrier. It's what needs to be done. The internet doesn't belong to anyone, and these corporations are trying to milk more dollars out of all their customers without actually providing any actual benefit. Enough is enough. We will not stand for this.

-Clayton Chan