The principle of "net neutrality" has been one of the guiding forces that has turned the Internet into possibly the most powerful force for progress in the history of the human race. The FCC needs to stand on the side of people, not corporations. To do anything less would be a miscarriage of justice the likes of which we cannot begin to understand.

My history with electronic communications goes back to the days of Bitnet. From that long perspective I find it astonishing that the FCC would even consider such a drastic measure. Yes, drastic.

Please put this idea where it needs to be, in the trash bin of history.

Thank you.
