

7521163635.txt

The internet is not broken, therefore it is not in need of a solution. Certainly when the "solution" is created unethically by cable company monopolies who stand to profit exclusively from the proposed changes. These changes would place startup companies at a disadvantage when it comes to affording higher broadband speeds. The internet is a pure democracy; don't cripple it.