

7521164016.txt

The current rulings that neuter net neutrality allow internet providers (who practically have a monopoly on customers) to receive funding from both customers (who have already paid for the service) and internet sources. Since customers have few to no options and internet sources will have to go where the customers are it will shrink innovation in the internet and prevent open communication. In short it will kill the internet's greatest strength.