This will go against every thing the internet stands for. It will be bad for start up business and the customer alike.

It will be bad for small business because they will be held to ransom by the providers.

Customers can not simply move companies, for me and many others in the area Cox is the only high speed provider.

The cable providers will not increase the speed of websites that have paid because unless you have a bad line they already work! Instead they will limit the speed of other sites and use the extra capacity to save on investing in their infrastructure.

Having recently moved here from the United Kingdom I find the monopolies that control Cable here to be utterly ridiculous. I have zero choice here, I have to take Cox. For me that means I am now paying twice as much for a connection a quarter of the speed.

This will only make that situation worse.

There is nothing I can do about it, there is no competition for DSL in the area so I cant vote with my feet, merely plead with you to not allow it to get worse.
