Please vote to maintain net neutrality ("dumb pipes") by regulating broadband under common carrier rules. Allowing broadband providers to charge for "fast-lanes" will be bad for innovation and bad for consumers. Already we have seen how Comcast used strong-arm tactics to extort money from NetFlix, there is no reason to expect any thing different if your current proposal goes through. This country already pays higher consumer broadband fees for lower quality service than most other countries. If broadband providers cannot upgrade their infrastructure with existing profit margins then how will this proposal change that? It will just result in higher profit margins and a justification for ISP's to throttle bandwidth for any one who won't pay to play.
