

The Internet is no longer a luxury or toy—it has become a vital communications network and as such, should not be controlled by industries with profit as their primary goal. Web access should not be for only those who can afford it. It's a new world; equal Internet access is vital to education, culture, and the economy.