

With the growing necessity of internet access for business, education, media, and press, allowing corporations to restrict speeds would be to allow them to censor speech or restrict access to the press. Destroying net neutrality will violate the First Amendment. It cannot be allowed.