Pull your head out of your arse FCC. Trusting the cable companies to have the customers best interest at heart when making decisions is absolutely laughable. Someone needs to explain to you dimwits what's at stake! Are the cable companies complaining that there's too much competition, they're too unprofitable, or have too small genitalia? Suck it. You (the FCC) is just going to bend over and get Rogered in the Hersey-Highway hoping that your Netflix account will still be streaming the next episode of Bronies when there's no longer net neutrality. You make me sick.
