

7521212491.txt

Hello! Thank you for your hard work. I just wanted to begin by stating NET NEUTRALITY PLEASE KEEP IT IT'S IMPORTANT.

Thanks for reading. Now; I'd like to direct your attention to a lovely website called Kickstarter. You can access it at www.kickstarter.com. The entire point of Kickstarter is quite simple; crowd-fund projects! A project currently being funded is a continuation of the popular educational program Reading Rainbow. It asked for 1,000,000 dollars to do so.

Would you like to know how much money it has currently? At 12:58 AM on a thursday, EDT, it has 3,475,690 dollars. Did you read that number? Let me repeat it. 3,475,690 dollars. And. Jumping.

My point by bringing this up is simple. The internet is an incredible being, almost like a force of nature. It can move for good or bad, for great or ill, for serious to silly. And these things are all so important! A cat video that makes me smile on youtube, e-mailing family, staying in contact with friends; These things are all important!

So what happens when you take away the neutrality the internet currently resides within? Some things become more important than others. Some internet providing executive decides he doesn't want me on youtube, he wants me on Facebook, so he slows youtube down and facebook up. Someone decides they don't quite like reading rainbow, so they make it slow and tedious to get to the site so noone donates DO YOU SEE THE POINT?

Defend net neutrality -- It is our future. Please, please, do not cripple our future. Do not cripple our knowledge, our laughter, our love, our generosity, our kindness, our hope. Do not destroy our hope -- For ourselves, and our future.

Thank you for considering my request.