

I am greatly in favor of net neutrality, and opposed to the current FCC proposal.

The splitting of the internet into two speeds will only create an obstacle for small businesses, the backbone of any industrial nation, to greatly suffer and lose it's primary tool to try and become relevant. In a time where startups are driving most new developments, not only will the currently supported proposal eliminate that opportunity for change & creativity, but will create an even strongly internet monopoly (something which our country has fought against for over a century).
