Specific bandwidth should be reserved for low power broadcast for such operations as wireless technology, intercom and telecommunications. These frequencies should not be infringed upon by mega corporations and become only the environment for the wealthy. The airwaves are a public resource for all and as such be provided access for everyone's use. That includes ensuring that high power broadcasts do not encroach on low power frequencies or that difference be given to mass communication firms. This should be considered a matter of national security because it is the individuals of our nation which provide our country communication and the ability to recover from disasters.
