The internet should be free to everyone and not be given exclusive options and speeds to those that can pay extra to provide it. This goes against everything that the internet stands for; the ability to look up any information, at any time, for free. No one should own the internet and especially not make a profit off of it. I understand providers have to pay for the connection, but to say that larger companies' ability to pay overrides a small business owner's lack to do the same, means that his website page loads 10 times slower than that of the $$ driven corporation and is given preferential treatment is wrong! If I pat Joe Schmoe for my wireless speed, that should be the end of it. We need less governmental meddling in the everyday logistics of life and more giving a damn about the well being of our people, what they consume (GMO) and actually making sure that healthcare is affordable rather than making companies raise premiums for sub-par coverage and have so many hoops to jump through that its easier to stay poor and live on government assistance than to make it on your own 2 feet and work hard for what you have and what you want. Its time for people to do what is right because its right, and not for profit!
