

7521310065.txt

Reclassifying ISPs as common carriers would not stunt investment in broadband. This is just being pushed by ISPs to get more money from what is commonly used by our public as content and apps, effectively creating a two-tiered Internet. It's undemocratic, it is entirely pro-business and not in the interest of our citizens, and an outright farce.

Through out your net discrimination rules and reclassify ISPs as common carriers.