

7521310144.txt

It's essential to the free exercise of speech, association, and the innovation that comes from both that net neutrality be preserved. For-profit corporations determining who gets heard versus who does not is fundamentally anti-democratic. Further institutionalizing inequality of opportunity in expression will not only harm the dynamic character of the internet, it will create an unfortunate "new normal" where Americans take for granted the principle that the more wealthy are more worthy of fundamental rights of expression. They're not. Preserve net neutrality.