In the past few years since I have been an employee of the most valuable computer company I have learned a great deal about technology and the way we interact with it. I am very blessed to work with an innovative and caring company. Being part of said company, I am all but required to have an active internet life to stay current with world affairs and the development of new technology. The internet as it is has become an integral part of my life, the lives of my peers and the lives of our customers. The freedom of expression is literally what helped me land the awesome job I have now. It has helped my friends and my customers start their own businesses, has let my sister share photos of my nephew, and has spread knowledge that has saved lives. The internet has it's dark side too, but like all things, freedom breeds creativity. Imagine a world where all things were ordered off of a menu, just like at your favorite restaurant. Imagine logging on to your computer and being able to pick from only a select few websites to visit, some being fast, some being near dial-up. Those that could not afford the premiums would just become dust metaphorical dust on the internet prairie. freedom is what this country was born of, and allowing companies like Time Warner and Comcast govern what I see and when I see it is a bastardization of this country's very foundation. Freedom is what has made this country great and is what has allowed so many to become so much more with a tool as open as the internet, and now it is under threat of being destroyed by companies that are trying to scam even more money from their consumers now that their sub-par, over priced internet service has been forced down the throat of so many Americans. I implore whomever is reading this, if there is anyone hearing our voice; Stop what you are doing now and say No to the companies trying to eliminate our freedom.
