

7521311435.txt

I live on a tiny Dutch Caribbean island with limited connection to the rest of the world. My satellite internet provides my communication, news, entertainment, and access to a world of reference information that I use several times every day. I can't imagine being without Internet, or no longer being able to trust the information I can find there.