The very idea of creating an elitist class of networking connection speed that hinders natural growth in today's economy is completely counter culture to what is American. The fact that I have to ask you to "please don't take away my freedom" means I truly do not have it at all. If you are a fan of proletariat class systems in a communistic approach to the freedoms we now enjoy because you are so influenced by greed, and want to turn your back on what is best for the people of this country, then it is very possible what should be voted on is how quickly you should be replaced.
