The broadband of our internet should not be able to be bought by corporations. That is the definition of a monopoly. Money should not be able to dictate what the public can or cannot see on the internet. If we as Americans believe in a free market capitalistic system, net neutrality would remain. Limiting the information we can view, based on money, would be, in definition, a plutocracy. I do not want to live in a plutocracy. I want to live in a free nation. Plutocracy is a dictatorship based on money. Please to not ban net neutrality and limit broadband based on money. Give me my freedom. Allow me, an American citizen, the right to see what I want on the Internet. Allow me to support businesses that I like. Allow me to live with information, unlike so many other countries. Please do not limit broadband for businesses who cannot pay, for the sake of America.
