

7521318977.txt

As an entrepreneur in tech, I rely on the ability to send data and communicate with customers at the same speed as large companies to give me the ability to compete and keep costs down. Allowing cable companies to regulate and charge for faster rails only has a risk of reducing innovation, job creation, and forward progress. I do not support any policy that will allow ISPs to charge or tax specific customers (whether they are consumers or other corporations) different rates to send data.