

7521328489.txt

The fact that citizens of the United States are paying so much more for internet of worse quality than in other industrialized countries is frankly outrageous. What is also ridiculous is that certain websites would, if net neutrality was destroyed, have priority over others simply for having the financial resources for doing so, actively discouraging American innovation.